B. A. in ENGLISH

In our program, students hone skills in analytical thinking, deep reading, and rhetorically effective writing as interdependent practices. The degree also fosters in students a keen understanding of the English language as they interpret texts and produce them across contexts. By providing opportunities for students to become well-rounded, socially aware, and empathetic citizens, professionals, and people, our English degree prepares graduates to read the past, inhabit an ever-changing present, and step confidently into the future they help imagine into being. The English major prepares graduates for a wide range of professional, civic, and personal opportunities. Our alumni have gone on to careers as published novelists, poets, or journalists, research analysts, social media managers, real estate agents, teachers, entrepreneurs, and more as well as pursued graduate study in law, library science, education, and ministry.

- Students must take at least one course from English 200, 270, 287, 288, and 289 before taking any 300/400-level literature courses in English. Because these 200-level survey courses are designed to give students a strong foundation for their upper-division course work, we encourage students to complete them early in the major.
- Students may choose to complete a writing concentration in either Creative or Professional Writing within the English major.
