Bylaws:

If the organization has bylaws, sections should cover the following. Please note that if the organization only has a constitution and no bylaws, this information should be included within the constitution.

- Detailed material concerning members: rights, duties, resignation, and expulsion procedures. Provision for honorary, associate members, or honorary officers if the group so desires.
- Provisions for initiation fees, if any, dues and assessments should be covered here; also details regarding delinquencies.
- Time and method of electing officers and duties of the officers.
- Duties, authority, and responsibility of an executive committee.
- The names of the standing committees and the method of choosing chairpersons and committee members. The duties of the committees should also be stated.
- A provision for some accepted rules of order or parliamentary manual as “Robert’s Rules of Order.”
- The number or proportion of the group constituting quorum.
- A method to amend the bylaws, usually by a majority vote.

The constitution should always display the date it was last revised. It is a good idea to insert in parentheses after an amendment that it was passed.
